

The military and the process of Havana: between fear to peace and adaptation to the new strategic environment.

The article describes and questions the role of the Colombian military in the current peace process Havana and its challenges once the counterinsurgency war ended. In this regard stresses resistance, divisions and mistrust of sectors within the military establishment, in relation to the peace policy of President Juan Manuel Santos and particularly, to a negotiated solution to the conflict with the FARC. Then and based on the concept of RSS Security Sector Reform, suggested some changes to the Armed Forces in order to have a state institutions to ensure the safety and expansion of democracy in Colombia 's Post-Conflict.

Keywords: Colombia, FF.MM. RSS, Post-Conflict