Current Research

"The Vanguard of the Atlantic World": Contesting Republicanism and Modernity in the Nineteenth-Century Americas." My second book-length project will explore how nineteenth-century Latin Americans envisioned their role in the construction and development of democracy, republicanism, and modernity in the Atlantic World. Broadly comparative, it will involve research about Colombia, Mexico, Uruguay, Cuba, Brazil, and Florida. I spent the spring of 2007 conducting research for this project at the Library of Congress with a Kluge Fellowship.
